

Vanya Walker-Leigh TSSF is an agricultural/environmental economist and financial journalist.

She is Vice-President of the Malta Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energies Association (NGO), international advisor to Nature Trust Malta, a founder member of the Malta Organic Agriculture Movement Senior Advisor to the 125 member Mediterranean NGO federation MIO, and adviser to the network of seven Mediterranean environmental NGO networks, the Comite de Sui vi

She has been a correspondent on international affairs for the Sunday Times of Malta since 2000. Previously she was the accredited correspondent to the United Nations Geneva of the UK 'Guardian', 'The Times (Business News) and The Sunday Times (Business News) and then accredited correspondent in Paris of leading Canadian, US and UK business publications, and a regular contributor to the International Herald Tribune. She has covered over 100 major UN and international conferences in five continents. She also worked as a research economist for the Battelle Institute Geneva, UNICEF-Malawi and the Commonwealth Secretariat.

A five times graduate of London University, UK she holds an honours degree in economics, and four Master's degrees in agricultural development, sustainable agriculture, environmental management and public international economic law.

She is a lay Franciscan – a professed member of the Third Order, Society of St. Francis (Anglican Communion).